Education

I completed my masters degree in Education specializing in curriculum studies, completing a thesis on integrated curriculum in June of 1996. I hold bachelors degrees in Education and Physical Education.

My current research and educational interests include using data to develop and assess individual programs based on student needs and whole school needs, cross graded groupings and integrated studies. I am also interested in alternative and future directions for education. I hope to one day be involved in writing alternative curriculum and training teachers in developing countries.
